SYLLABUS

OCTOBER TERM, 2004

TORY V. COCHRAN

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

TORY et al. v . COCHRAN

certiorari to the court of appeal of california, second appellate district

No. 03-1488.Argued March 22, 2005-Decided May 31, 2005

In a state-law defamation action filed by attorney Johnnie L. Cochran, Jr., a California trial court found that petitioner Tory, assisted by petitioner Craft and others, had, inter alia, falsely claimed that Cochran owed him money, picketed Cochran's office with signs containing insults and obscenities, and pursued Cochran while chanting similar threats and insults, in order to coerce Cochran into paying Tory money to desist from such libelous and slanderous activity. Because Tory indicated that he would continue to engage in the activity absent a court order, the court permanently enjoined petitioners and their agents from, among other things, picketing, displaying signs, and making oral statements about Cochran and his firm in any public forum. The California Court of Appeal affirmed, and this Court granted certiorari. After oral argument, Cochran's counsel informed the Court of Cochran's death, moved to substitute Cochran's widow as respondent, and suggested that the case be dismissed as moot. Petitioners agreed to the substitution, but denied that the case was moot.

Held: Cochran's widow is substituted as respondent, but the case is not moot. Despite Cochran's death, the injunction remains in effect. Nothing in its language says to the contrary. Cochran's counsel argues that the injunction is still necessary, valid, and enforceable, and no source of California law says that it automatically became invalid upon Cochran's death. As this Court understands that law, a person cannot definitively know whether an injunction is legally void until a court has ruled that it is. Given this uncertainty, the injunction here continues significantly to restrain petitioners' speech, thus presenting an ongoing federal controversy. Cochran's death, however, makes it unnecessary for this Court to explore petitioners' basic claims. Rather, the Court need only point out that the injunction, as written, has lost its underlying rationale. Since picketing Cochran and his law offices while engaging in injunction-forbidden speech could no longer coerce Cochran to pay for desisting in this activity, the grounds for the injunction are much diminished or have disappeared altogether. Consequently the injunction amounts to an overly broad prior restraint upon speech, lacking plausible justification. Pp. 2-4.

Vacated and remanded.

Breyer, J., delivered the opinion of the Court, in which Rehnquist, C. J., and Stevens, O'Connor, Kennedy, Souter, and Ginsburg, JJ., joined. Thomas, J., filed a

OPINION OF THE COURT

TORY V. COCHRAN

544 U. S. ____ (2005)

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

NO. 03-1488

ULYSSES TORY, et al., PETITIONERS v. JOHNNIE L. COCHRAN, Jr.

on writ of certiorari to the court of appeal of california, second appellate district

[May 31, 2005]

Justice Breyer delivered the opinion of the Court.

Johnnie Cochran brought a state-law defamation action against petitioner Ulysses Tory. The state trial court determined that Tory (with the help of petitioner Ruth Craft and others) had engaged in unlawful defamatory activity. It found, for example, that Tory, while claiming falsely that Cochran owed him money, had complained to the local bar association, had written Cochran threatening letters demanding $10 million, had picketed Cochran's office holding up signs containing various insults and obscenities; and, with a group of associates, had pursued Cochran while chanting similar threats and insults. App. 38, 40-41. The court concluded that Tory's claim that Cochran owed him money was without foundation, that Tory engaged in a continuous pattern of libelous and slanderous activity, and that Tory had used false and defamatory speech to coerce Cochran into paying amounts of money to which Tory was not entitled as a tribute or a premium for desisting from this libelous and slanderous activity. Id. , at 39, 42-43.

After noting that Tory had indicated that he would continue to engage in this activity in the absence of a court order, the Superior Court issued a permanent injunction. The injunction, among other things, prohibited Tory, Craft, and their agents or representatives from picketing, from displaying signs, placards or other written or printed material, and from orally uttering statements about Johnnie L. Cochran, Jr., and about Cochrans law firm in any public forum. Id. , at 34.

Tory and Craft appealed. The California Court of Appeal affirmed. Tory and Craft then filed a petition for a writ of certiorari, raising the following question:

Whether a permanent injunction as a remedy in a defamation action, preventing all future speech about an admitted public figure, violates the First Amendment. Pet. for Cert. i.

We granted the petition. 542 U. S. ____ (2004).

After oral argument, Cochrans counsel informed the Court of Johnnie Cochrans recent death. Counsel also moved to substitute Johnnie Cochrans widow, Sylvia Dale Mason Cochran, as respondent, and suggested that we dismiss the case as moot. Tory and Craft filed a response agreeing to the substitution of Ms. Cochran. But they denied that the case was moot.

We agree with Tory and Craft that the case is not moot. Despite Johnnie Cochrans death, the injunction remains in effect. Nothing in its language says to the contrary. Cochrans counsel tells us that California law does not recognize a cause of action for an injury to the memory of a deceased persons reputation, see Kelly v. Johnson Pub. Co. , 160 Cal. App. 2d 718, 325 P. 2d 659 (1958), which circumstance, counsel believes, moots a portion of the injunction (the portion personal to Cochran). Respondents Suggestion of Death, etc., 4 (emphasis added). But counsel adds that [t]he [i]njunction continues to be necessary, valid and enforceable. Id. , at 9. The parties have not identified, nor have we found, any source of California law that says the injunction here automatically becomes invalid upon Cochrans death, not even the portion personal to Cochran. Counsel also points to the value of Cochrans law practice and adds that his widow has an interest in enforcing the injunction. Id. , at 11-12. And, as we understand California law, a person cannot definitively know whether an injunction is legally void until a court has ruled that it is. See Mason v. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., 60 Cal. App. 2d 587, 591, 141 P. 2d 475, 477-478 (1943) ([W]here the party served believes a court order invalid he should take the proper steps to have it dissolved); People v. Gonzalez, 12 Cal. 4th 804, 818, 910 P. 2d 1366, 1375 (1996) ([A] person subject to a courts injunction may elect whether to challenge the constitutional validity of the injunction when it is issued, or to reserve that claim until a violation of the injunction is charged as a contempt of court). Given the uncertainty of California law, we take it as a given that the injunction here continues significantly to restrain petitioners speech, presenting an ongoing federal controversy. See, e.g., Dombrowski v. Pfister, 380 U. S. 479, 486-487 (1965); NAACP v. Button, 371 U. S. 415, 432-433 (1963). Consequently, we need not, and we do not, dismiss this case as moot. Cf. Firefighters v. Stotts, 467 U. S. 561, 569 (1984) (case not moot in part because it appears from terms of the injunction that it is still in force and unless set aside must be complied with).

At the same time, Johnnie Cochrans death makes it unnecessary, indeed unwarranted, for us to explore petitioners basic claims, namely (1) that the First Amendment forbids the issuance of a permanent injunction in a defamation case, at least when the plaintiff is a public figure, and (2) that the injunction (considered prior to Cochrans death) was not properly tailored and consequently violated the First Amendment. See Brief for Petitioners ii, iii. Rather, we need only point out that the injunction, as written, has now lost its underlying rationale. Since picketing Cochran and his law offices while engaging in injunction-forbidden speech could no longer achieve the objectives that the trial court had in mind (i.e., coercing Cochran to pay a tribute for desisting in this activity), the grounds for the injunction are much diminished, if they have not disappeared altogether. Consequently the injunction, as written, now amounts to an overly broad prior restraint upon speech, lacking plausible justification. See Nebraska Press Assn. v. Stuart, 427 U. S. 539, 559 (1976) ([P]rior restraints on speech and publication are the most serious and the least tolerable infringement on First Amendment rights); Pittsburgh Press Co. v. Pittsburgh Commn on Human Relations, 413 U. S. 376, 390 (1973) (a prior restraint should not swee[p] any more broadly than necessary). As such, the Constitution forbids it. See Carroll v. President and Commrs of Princess Anne, 393 U. S. 175 , 183-184 (1968) (An order issued in the area of First Amendment rights must be precis[e] and narrowly tailored to achieve the pin-pointed objective of the needs of the case); see also Board of Airport Commrs of Los Angeles v. Jews for Jesus, Inc. , 482 U. S. 569 , 575, 577 (1987) (regulation prohibiting all First Amendment activities substantially overbroad).

We consequently grant the motion to substitute Sylvia Dale Mason Cochran for Johnnie Cochran as respondent. We vacate the judgment of the California Court of Appeal, and we remand the case for proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion. If, as the Cochran supplemental brief suggests, injunctive relief may still be warranted, any appropriate party remains free to ask for such relief. We express no view on the constitutional validity of any such new relief, tailored to these changed circumstances, should it be entered.

It is so ordered.

THOMAS, J., DISSENTING

TORY V. COCHRAN

544 U. S. ____ (2005)

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

NO. 03-1488

ULYSSES TORY, et al., PETITIONERS v. JOHNNIE L.COCHRAN, Jr.

on writ of certiorari to the court of appeal ofcalifornia, second appellate district

[May 31, 2005]

Justice Thomas, with whom Justice Scalia joins, dissenting.

I would dismiss the writ of certiorari as improvidently granted. We granted the writ, as the Court notes, to decide

[w]hether a permanent injunction as a remedy in a defamation action, preventing all future speech about an admitted public figure, violates the First Amendment. Pet. for Cert. i; ante , at 2.

Whether or not Johnnie Cochran's death moots this case, it certainly renders the case an inappropriate vehicle for resolving the question presented. The Court recognizes this, ante , at 3, but nevertheless vacates the judgment below, ante , at 4. It does so only after deciding, as it must to exercise jurisdiction, that in light of the uncertainty in California law, the case is not moot. Ante , at 2-3; ASARCO Inc. v. Kadish, 490 U. S. 605 , 621, n. 1 (1989) (when a case coming from a state court becomes moot, this Court lack[s] jurisdiction and thus also the power to disturb the state court's judgment); see also City News & Novelty, Inc. v. Waukesha, 531 U. S. 278 , 283-284 (2001).

In deciding the threshold mootness issue, a complicated problem in its own right, the Court strains to reach the validity of the injunction after Cochran's death. Whether the injunction remains valid in these changed circumstances is neither the reason we took this case nor an important question, but merely a matter of case-specific error correction. Petitioners remain free to seek relief on both constitutional and state-law grounds in the California courts. And, if the injunction is invalid, they need not obey it: California does not recognize the collateral bar rule, and thus permits collateral challenges to injunctions in contempt proceedings. People v. Gonzalez , 12 Cal. 4th 804, 818, 910 P. 2d 1366, 1375 (1996) (a person subject to an injunction may challenge the constitutional validity of the injunction when it is issued, or . . . reserve that claim until a violation of the injunction is charged as a contempt of court). The California courts can resolve the matter and, given the new state of affairs, might very well adjudge the case moot or the injunction invalid on state-law grounds rather than the constitutional grounds the Court rushes to embrace. As a prudential matter, the better course is to avoid passing unnecessarily on the constitutional question. See Ashwander v. TVA, 297 U. S. 288 , 345-348 (1936) (Brandeis, J., concurring).

The Court purports to save petitioners the uncertainty of possible enforcement of the injunction, and thereby to prevent any chill on their First Amendment rights, by vacating the decision below. But what the Court gives with the left hand it takes with the right, for it only invites further litigation by pronouncing that injunctive relief may still be warranted, conceding that any appropriate party remains free to ask for such relief, and express[ing] no view on the constitutional validity of any such new relief. Ante , at 4. What the Court means by any appropriate party is unclear. Perhaps the Court means Sylvia Dale Mason Cochran, Cochran's widow, who has taken his place in this suit. Or perhaps it means the Cochran firm, which has never been a party to this case, but may now (if appropriate) intervene and attempt to enjoin the defamation of a now-deceased third party. The Court's decision invites the doubts it seeks to avoid. Its decision is unnecessary and potentially self-defeating. The more prudent course is to dismiss the writ as improvidently granted. I respectfully dissent.
