§~17 * IN THE HIGH COURT OF DELHI AT NEW DELHI + CRL.M.C. 4814/2014 DEEPAK KUMAR & ORS Petitioners Through: Mr. Y.N. Singh Sengar & Mr.Abhishek Bhargava, Advocates with petitioners in person versus STATE (GOVT OF NCT DELHI) & ANR Respondents Through: Ms. Nishi Jain, APP with Insp. Rajesh Kumar, PS Rajouri Garden R-2/complainant in person CORAM: HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE SUDERSHAN KUMAR MISRA % SUDERSHAN KUMAR MISRA, J.

(ORAL) 1. This petition has been moved under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure seeking quashing of FIR No.369/2011 registered under Sections 498A/406/34 IPC at Police Station Rajouri Garden on 01.10.2011 on the ground that the matter has been settled between the parties.

2. Issue notice.

3. Counsel for the State enters appearance and accepts notice. The complainant, Ritu, is present in person. The Investigating Officer, Inspector Rajesh Kumar, Police Station Rajouri Garden, who is also present in Court, identifies the petitioners as well as the complainant, who is arrayed as respondent No.2 in this petition.

4. It is stated that the aforesaid FIR came to be lodged by the complainant as a result of certain domestic and matrimonial disputes that has arisen between the parties, consequent upon her marriage to the first petitioner, Deepak Kumar, on 02.11.2009. In addition, the complainant had also instituted proceedings under Section 125 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Code, as well as under Section 12 of the Domestic Violence Act. At the same time, the first petitioner, Deepak Kumar, instituted a petition for divorce under Section 13(1)(B) of the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955 in Ghaziabad, U.P.

5. On an application moved by the second respondent/complainant for cancellation of bail in connection with the same FIR No.369/2011, the matter was referred by the trial court on 15.07.2013 to the Mediation Centre, Tis Hazari Courts, Delhi; where the parties have arrived at a mutually acceptable settlement on 03.08.2013. A copy of the same setting down all the terms has also been annexed to this petition.

6. It is stated that in compliance with their settlement, the marriage of the complainant and the first petitioner was dissolved by mutual consent under Section 13(B)(2) of the Hindu Marriage Act on 21.03.2014. A copy of the decree passed by the matrimonial court has also been annexed to this petition.

7. The proceedings instituted by the complainant under Section 125 Cr.P.C. and under Section 12 of the Domestic Violence Act have also been duly withdrawn by her.

8. Further, in terms of the settlement, the first petitioner had undertaken to pay a total amount of Rs. 10 Lacs to the complainant/ second respondent herein. Out of this amount, a sum of Rs. 7 Lacs is stated to have been already paid to her. The remaining balance amount of Rs. 3 Lacs has been handed over to the complainant in Court today by way of a Pay Order No.019649 dated 16.10.2014 drawn on Axis Bank Ltd.

9. The complainant approves the aforesaid settlement and submits that with the receipt of the aforesaid amount of Rs. 3 Lacs, nothing further is due to her from the petitioners; and further, that she is no longer interested in pursuing the matter and prays that the matter be closed.

10. Counsel for the State submits that looking to the overall circumstances, and since the matter has arisen primarily out of domestic and matrimonial disputes where the parties have now amicably settled the matter on terms; and the complainant is no longer interested in supporting the prosecution, no useful purpose would be served in continuing with the same.

11. Looking to the decision of the Supreme Court in Gian Singh v. State of Punjab, (2012) 10 SCC303 which has referred to a number of matters for the proposition that even a non-compoundable offence can also be quashed on the ground of a settlement agreement between the offender and the victim, if the circumstances so warrant; by observing as under:

58.However, certain offences which overwhelmingly and predominantly bear civil flavour having arisen out of civil, mercantile, commercial, financial, partnership or such like transactions or the offences arising out of matrimony, particularly relating to dowry, etc. or the family dispute, where the wrong is basically to the victim and the offender and the victim have settled all disputes between them amicably, irrespective of the fact that such offences have not been made compoundable, the High Court may within the framework of its inherent power, quash the criminal proceeding or criminal complaint or FIR if it is satisfied that on the face of such settlement, there is hardly any likelihood of the offender being convicted and by not quashing the criminal proceedings, justice shall be casualty and ends of justice shall be defeated.

And also in Narinder Singh and Ors. v. State of Punjab and Anr. 2014(2) Crimes 67 (SC) where the Supreme Court held as follows:

29. In view of the aforesaid discussion, we sum up and lay down the following principles by which the High Court would be guided in giving adequate treatment to the settlement between the parties and exercising its power under Section 482 of the Code while accepting the settlement and quashing the proceedings or refusing to accept the settlement with direction to continue with the criminal proceedings:

29.1 Power conferred under Section 482 of the Code is to be distinguished from the power which lies in the Court to compound the offences under Section 320 of the Code. No doubt, under Section 482 of the Code, the High Court has inherent power to quash the criminal proceedings even in those cases which are not compoundable, where the parties have settled the matter between themselves. However, this power is to be exercised sparingly and with caution. 29.2 When the parties have reached the settlement and on that basis petition for quashing the criminal proceedings is filed, the guiding factor in such cases would be to secure: (i) ends of justice, or (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of any Court. While exercising the power the High Court is to form an opinion on either of the aforesaid two objectives. 29.3 Such a power is not to be exercised in those prosecutions which involve heinous and serious offences of mental depravity or offences like murder, rape, dacoity, etc. Such offences are not private in nature and have a serious impact on society. Similarly, for offences alleged to have been committed under special statute like the Prevention of Corruption Act or the offences committed by Public Servants while working in that capacity are not to be quashed merely on the basis of compromise between the victim and the offender. 29.4 On the other hand, those criminal cases having overwhelmingly and pre-dominantly civil character, particularly those arising out of commercial transactions or arising out of matrimonial relationship or family disputes should be quashed when the parties have resolved their entire disputes among themselves. 29.5 While exercising its powers, the High Court is to examine as to whether the possibility of conviction is remote and bleak and continuation of criminal cases would put the accused to great oppression and prejudice and extreme injustice would be caused to him by not quashing the criminal cases. 29.6 Offences under Section 307 Indian Penal Code would fall in the category of heinous and serious offences and therefore is to be generally treated as crime against the society and not against the individual alone. However, the High Court would not rest its decision merely because there is a mention of Section 307 Indian Penal Code in the FIR or the charge is framed under this provision. It would be open to the High Court to examine as to whether incorporation of Section 307 Indian Penal Code is there for the sake of it or the prosecution has collected sufficient evidence, which if proved, would lead to proving the charge under Section 307 Indian Penal Code. For this purpose, it would be open to the High Court to go by the nature of injury sustained, whether such injury is inflicted on the vital/delegate parts of the body, nature of weapons used etc. Medical report in respect of injuries suffered by the victim can generally be the guiding factor. On the basis of this prima facie analysis, the High Court can examine as to whether there is a strong possibility of conviction or the chances of conviction are remote and bleak. In the former case it can refuse to accept the settlement and quash the criminal proceedings whereas in the later case it would be permissible for the High Court to accept the plea compounding the offence based on complete settlement between the parties. At this stage, the Court can also be swayed by the fact that the settlement between the parties is going to result in harmony between them which may improve their future relationship. 29.7 While deciding whether to exercise its power under Section 482 of the Code or not, timings of settlement play a crucial role. Those cases where the settlement is arrived at immediately after the alleged commission of offence and the matter is still under investigation, the High Court may be liberal in accepting the settlement to quash the criminal proceedings/investigation. It is because of the reason that at this stage the investigation is still on and even the charge sheet has not been filed. Likewise, those cases where the charge is framed but the evidence is yet to start or the evidence is still at infancy stage, the High Court can show benevolence in exercising its powers favourably, but after prima facie assessment of the circumstances/material mentioned above. On the other hand, where the prosecution evidence is almost complete or after the conclusion of the evidence the matter is at the stage of argument, normally the High Court should refrain from exercising its power under Section 482 of the Code, as in such cases the trial court would be in a position to decide the case finally on merits and to come a conclusion as to whether the offence under Section 307 Indian Penal Code is committed or not. Similarly, in those cases where the conviction is already recorded by the trial court and the matter is at the appellate stage before the High Court, mere compromise between the parties would not be a ground to accept the same resulting in acquittal of the offender who has already been convicted by the trial court. Here charge is proved under Section 307 Indian Penal Code and conviction is already recorded of a heinous crime and, therefore, there is no question of sparing a convict found guilty of such a crime.

And specifically in respect of matrimonial disputes in Jitendra Raghuvanshi & Ors. v. Babita Raghuvanshi & Anr. (2013) 4 SCC58 where the Supreme Court held as follows:

15. In our view, it is the duty of the courts to encourage genuine settlements of matrimonial disputes, particularly, when the same are on considerable increase. Even if the offences are non-compoundable, if they relate to matrimonial disputes and the Court is satisfied that the parties have settled the same amicably and without any pressure, we hold that for the purpose of securing ends of justice, Section 320 of the Code would not be a bar to the exercise of power of quashing of FIR, complaint or the subsequent criminal proceedings.

16. There has been an outburst of matrimonial disputes in recent times. The institution of marriage occupies an important place and it has an important role to play in the society. Therefore, every effort should be made in the interest of the individuals in order to enable them to settle down in life and live peacefully. If the parties ponder over their defaults and terminate their disputes amicably by mutual agreement instead of fighting it out in a court of law, in order to do complete justice in the matrimonial matters, the courts should be less hesitant in exercising their extraordinary jurisdiction. It is trite to state that the power under Section 482 should be exercised sparingly and with circumspection only when the Court is convinced, on the basis of material on record, that allowing the proceedings to continue would be an abuse of process of court or that the ends of justice require that the proceedings ought to be quashed.

I am of the considered opinion that the matter which has arisen out of a domestic and matrimonial dispute, where the parties have now settled the matter on terms, and the complainant is no longer interested in supporting the prosecution thereby greatly diminishing the chances of its success, it is best to give a quietus to the matter.

12. Consequently, the petition is allowed and the FIR No.369/2011 registered under Sections 498A/406/34 IPC at Police Station Rajouri Garden, and all the proceedings emanating therefrom, are hereby quashed.

13. The petition stands disposed off. SUDERSHAN KUMAR MISRA, J.
